Maria Isabel’s family has just moved from one part of the city to another.
She has had to switch schools two months after the start of the school year.
To make matters worse, there are two other girls named Maria in her new class, so the teacher has decided to call her Mary Lopez instead of Maria Isabel Lopez Salazar.
This upsets her, for she is proud of her name, which is made up of the names of relatives she loves in Puerto Rico. Because she doesn’t realize she is being called on when the teacher says “Mary Lopez,” Maria Isabel has missed the chance to perform in the Winter Pageant.
